On Saturday, March 3, 2018 the International Women's Day 3.3 Tokyo Rally was held at the Bunkyo Gender Equality Center, Bunkyo ward, Tokyo. In the venue, the big red characters "Oppose Wars" on the board for the rally raised in front jumped into my eyes. On the left down was a red banner of HOWS (Hongo Cultural Forum Workers School), the red roses at the podium, and two red banners with the demands before the Russian Revolution, such as eight hour work day, on left and right sides of the wall on the stage. The demands, more than ten, all fit the demand and problems of the contemporary Japanese workers. Furthermore, five banners for the march on the street claim such as "Against amendment to the Constitution," "Stop building the Henoko air base," and "Don't put fire on the Korean Peninsula. The intent of the organizer was very clear. These must have encouraged the participants and the speakers of the rally. YONEMARU Kasane, MC of the Rally
